

D'Amico takes chair at Standard Club

Italian owner will take over from Rod Jones in January, with Nicolas Hadjioannou assuming new post.

November 1st, 2017 09:56 GMT by Andy Pierce

Cesare d'Amico is set to take on the chairmanship of the Standard Club from January.

The Italian shipowner will assume the seat from Rod Jones, who is retiring from CSL Group.

The move, first reported by TradeWinds this summer, comes alongside the appointment of Nicolas Hadjioannou of Alassia Newships Management as joint deputy chairman.

Jeremy Grose, chief executive of the Standard Club, says d'Amico has been a committed member of the board, serving as deputy chairman for over three years.

“The club is committed to supporting its members and has ambitious plans for the year ahead and I look forward to working with Cesare as chairman,” he added.